

Introduction

This scholarship directory reflects information forwarded to the Triton College Scholarship Office by various scholarship grantors. Scholarship grantors can modify scholarship requirements, deadline dates, and the amount of the scholarship at any time. We recommend that you contact the grantor directly for updated information. If the grantor has provided us with an email address or website, we have included it in the available information.

Searching for financial assistance for your education takes determination, time, and resourcefulness. Begin your scholarship search by forming a plan, the same way you would in developing a plan for a job search.

This directory is only the beginning. You will need to consult many sources when searching for scholarships. You may need to write to the contact address listed in the directory or check the website to obtain or download an application.

Many scholarship grantors are now requiring you to download applications and/or apply online. If the grantor has provided us with an email address, we have included it in the information available. If you do not have access to a computer, the Financial Aid Office does have computers available for student scholarship searches and can provide staff to help you.

Do not forget to check the resources in your own community: local businesses, professional organizations, and service groups. Some of these resources can be found in the service organization section of this directory. If you are employed, check with your human resources office. Some companies pay for part, or all, of their employees' college tuition costs or extend scholarship opportunities to immediate relatives of employees.

In the back section of this directory, you will find two other sources to help you in your search. The first is a list of internet scholarship websites. These websites are free and reflect sites Triton students have recommended as helpful. In some cases, our scholarship web page will allow you to immediately link to these websites. The second is a listing of reference books currently in the Triton College Library with their call numbers.

Good luck in your search!

JEAN MCALPINE POWELL MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

Scholarship Amount: $500 per year to be used for tuition, fees, and books

Background:

The Jean McAlpine Powell Memorial Scholarship was established in 2015 by Jean's children, after her death in late 2014.

Jean was a resilient, kind and bright woman who worked at Triton College for many years, as an Academic Advisor. She was the perfect example of resilience and sheer will when she emerged from a painful divorce in her 40's. She was determined to go to college and was able to take that first step when a neighbor gave her a loan of $500. She didn't stop at classes, but obtained two Associates degrees from Triton and then went on to achieve her Bachelor's degree from National Louis University. She was a fierce advocate for battered women, young people trying to overcome tough situations to improve their lives and get an education.

She believed strongly in the power of lifelong education, second chances, and that a little support and push in the right direction can change lives.

Requirements:

- Full-time or part-time student
- Degree or certificate-seeking student
- Must be female, aged 30 or older, divorced or single Mother with children.
- Completion of Foundation Scholarship application

Internet Sites And Library Reference Materials

The Internet is a good source to help you find information on outside scholarships. Students have found the sites on the next page helpful in doing these searches. However, you should be aware that numerous search engines are available on the Internet and you will need to evaluate each of them.

The search engines listed below do not charge for their services. There is no reason to pay for a scholarship search. Paying for a search does not mean you are guaranteed a scholarship.

Questions will be asked by each site to develop your profile. The search companies use your profile to match you with potential scholarship opportunities in their database. The profile may ask for information about your goals, ethnic background, grade point average, interests, organizations you or your parents are affiliated with, military status, your expected college major, the schools you are interested in attending, and so on. It would be to your advantage to have this information available before you begin filling out the form on the search engine.

All search engines will require that you provide an email address. Some responses are immediate, some will take a few days, and others will continually update your email as new scholarships become available.

In addition to the search engines, you may wish to see if any organizations you or your family members belong to have their own websites. Some of these sites will list scholarships that are available to members of their organizations.

Remember the search engines will only give you information on potential scholarships. Based on the results received from your search, you will need to decide if you meet the detailed requirements of the scholarship. You may need to write for the applications of those scholarships you wish to apply for or download them from a website.

The following are "search engines" on the web that our students have found to be useful as they look for scholarships. Check our scholarship web page for new additions.

SCHOLARSHIP SCAMS

Never pay anyone to do a scholarship search for you.

Scholarship scams do exist! See the information below from the Federal Trade Commission.

Additional information is available on their website:

www.consumer.ftc.gov/articles/0082-scholarship-and-financial-aid-scams

Need Money for College? Doesn't everybody?

With tuition bills skyrocketing, and room and board going through the roof, students and their families are looking for creative ways to finance a college education. Unfortunately, in their efforts to pay the bills, many of them are falling prey to scholarship and financial aid scams. According to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), the nation's consumer protection agency, unscrupulous companies guarantee or promise scholarships, grants or fantastic financial aid packages. Many use high pressure sales pitches at seminars where you're required to pay immediately or risk losing out on the "opportunity."

Some unscrupulous companies guarantee that they can get scholarships on behalf of students or award them "scholarships" in exchange for an advance fee. Most offer a "money back guarantee" – but attach conditions that make it impossible to get the refund. Others provide nothing for the student's advance fee – not even a list of potential sources; still others tell students they've been selected as "finalists" for awards that require an up-front fee. Sometimes, these companies ask for a student's checking account to "confirm eligibility," then debit the account without the student's consent. Other companies quote only a relatively small "monthly" or "weekly" fee and then ask for authorization to debit your checking account – for an undetermined length of time.

Other companies claim they have programs that could make you eligible to receive financial aid, including grants, loans, work-study and other types of aid. For a processing fee, they'll handle all the paperwork. But experts caution: The only application that will determine eligibility for all programs is the Free Application for Federal Student Aid \(FAFSA\) – a form you can complete and submit for free.

The FTC cautions students to look and listen for these tell-tale lines:

- The scholarship is guaranteed or your money back."
- "You can't get this information anywhere else."
- "I just need your credit card or bank account number to hold this scholarship."
- "We'll do all the work. You just pay a processing fee."
- "The scholarship will cost some money."
- "You've been selected" by a "national foundation" to receive a scholarship – or "You're a finalist" in a contest you never entered.

If you attend a seminar on financial aid or scholarships, follow these steps:

- Take your time. Don't be rushed into paying at the seminar. Avoid high-pressure sales pitches that require you to buy now or risk losing out on the opportunity. Solid opportunities are not sold through nerve-racking tactics.
- Investigate the organization you're considering paying for help. Talk to a guidance counselor or financial aid advisor before spending your money. You may be able to get the same help for free.
- Be wary of "success stories" or testimonials of extraordinary success – the seminar operation may have paid "shills" to give glowing stories. Instead, ask for a list of at least three local families who've used the services in the last year. Ask each if they're satisfied with the products and services received.
- Be cautious about purchasing from seminar representatives who are reluctant to answer questions or who give evasive answers to your questions. Legitimate business people are more than willing to give you information about their service.
- Ask how much money is charged for the service, the services that will be performed and the company's refund policy. Get this information in writing. Keep in mind that you may never recoup the money you give to an unscrupulous operator, despite stated refund policies.

The FTC says many legitimate companies advertise that they can get students access to lists of scholarships in exchange for an advance fee. Other legitimate services charge an advance fee to compare a student's profile with a database of scholarship opportunities and provide a list of awards for which a student may qualify. And, there are online scholarship search engines. The difference: Legitimate companies never guarantee or promise scholarships or grants.

If you're contacted by companies or visit websites that say they'll process your FAFSA for a fee, do yourself a favor and save some money, too. Visit StudentAid.gov, the U.S. Department of Education's site for free information on preparing for and funding education beyond high school. You can complete the FAFSA at www.fafsa.gov, and learn about other FAFSA filing options at www.fafsa.ed.gov/options.htm. You also can call 1-800-4-FED-AID.
